- House Wide Audio Distribution System (Indoors and outdoors)*
- Lighting System (Reduces the number of wall switches and can run automatically).*
- Networking (Internet jacks at specific locations such as a home office or bedroom).*
- Wireless Networking (Wireless antennas placed around your home to provide wireless connections to your phones, iPads, printers and other wireless equipment).*
- Systems Integration – Putting many of the house systems into a single control system that has wall mounted touch panels or by using iPads and iPhones to control Lighting, security, HVAC, pool and spa, Video Monitoring, Property Access, as well as audio and video and other systems with a single App.*
- Cell Phone Repeater – Many properties have weak cell phone signal and that signal disappears once you enter the home. This system will bring the cell phone signal into the home.*
- Motorized Shades and Blinds.*
- Digital Phone System (Has intercom, one-touch buttons, multiple lines and speed-dial features, integrates easily with gate and door entry systems, other features include whole-house paging and conferencing).*
- Power Protection Systems – Power quality is one of the single greatest problems that exist for all technology systems. Protection against surges and other damaging power quality issues is important to extending the life of these systems and reducing trouble calls.*
